“There is definitely a lot of value with ASCII. You guys stand apart as the preeminent professionals for IT service firms. There is no one else that comes close.”

– David Streit, Principal, Stephill Associates

The concept of ASCII is simple. What sets The ASCII Group apart is that it is a community open to all independent IT practices – ranging in size and scope from a single person operation to large companies with many employees. While independent solution providers are a key element of the channel, how much power do you have within the channel if you are a single pinpoint versus the power if you’re part of 1,000 pinpoints? ASCII brings those 1,000 pinpoints together and is your voice in the channel.

David Streit is the Principal and owner of Stephill Associates, a one man shop based out of New Jersey…but you would never know that, based on his website or client roster. As an MSP specializing in IT infrastructure services and systems, David provides support in central and northern New Jersey and New York City for small businesses up to 50 employees. With clients ranging from a large irrigation company to a plastic surgeon on Park Avenue – David jokes, “I’m more successful than I anticipated.”

Operating since 2003, David’s goal, like many other solution providers, is to grow his business and he knew that he needed to expand his current circle; he was interested in meeting like-minded peers as well as new vendors. The ASCII Group seemed like the right fit.

ASCII is a membership-based model, not a franchise arrangement – so it doesn’t change the way you run your business. The ASCII Group is able to remain vendor agnostic and does not require the use of any particular vendor or service to be a part of the community.

“I am a huge fan of ASCII. You have affected my practice in a positive way. I think you listen to your members…I can be vocal when I’m not happy and I report on it. You have a great management team that follows through.”

“I can’t tell you how many products I have learned about from discussions on ASCII-Link. I may not always contribute…but I’m definitely listening and learning to what others are saying.”

Some of the other items that David has taken advantage of include the distributor discounts and business insurance programs offered to members. ASCII has specific volume purchase agreements with leading distributors that provide not only higher levels of service but special pricing discounts. Each distributor has created special pricing levels for ASCII members, regardless of how much they buy with them. For the insurance program, members receive reduced rates without sacrificing coverage on business and general liability insurance. “I get great rebates and discounts and was treated like a class act!”

Other key programs that are included for free with ASCII membership include the eNewsletter and PR opportunities. Knowing how important customer touch points are for a business of his size, David regularly uses the eNewsletter service to create customizable, monthly newsletters he can distribute up to 2,000 customers. He has also benefitted from the PR opportunities by providing articles to leading industry publications which he is able to post and share from his website.
